

Fact Sheet: Army Medicine Wolf Pack Award

The Surgeon General and the Chief of the AMEDD Civilian Corps created the Wolf Pack Award to recognize exceptional teamwork by an integrated group of military and civilian team members focused on excellence in support of Army Medicine.

Intent

Sponsored by the AMEDD Civilian Corps, this award is designed to recognize and celebrate successes of teams throughout Army Medicine.

Winning teams will be selected and announced quarterly. Quarterly winners will automatically compete for the "Wolf Pack of the Year" Award, presented annually at the MEDCOM Training Symposium or other appropriate forum.

Inspire Teamwork.....

Engage Talent.....

Achieve Excellence

"...the Power of the Pack is the Wolf

and the Power of the Wolf is the Pack..."

Eligibility

Eligible teams must consist of a mix of civilian and military team members, and may include contractors. The Wolf Pack Award will recognize teamwork that drives excellence in outcomes supporting the Army Medicine mission.

Selection Criteria

The winning teams must demonstrate excellence and effective teamwork resulting in significant products or services with the potential for broad impact in support of Army Medicine.

Nomination Procedures
